

President's Message

March 2026

Spring is around the corner. We have had spring-like weather for a while. The trees are starting to blossom.

January was quiet. The new board was sworn in. We have been busy planning the events for the year. We are also working on some ideas for informational meetings. Please let a board member know if you have any ideas. If you are not able to find a member, you can also put your ideas in the Association box.

This month we will be having some events. On March 8th, there will be a Chinese Lantern Festival with a performance by the Red Sorghum Art Troupe in the clubhouse. The show will be from 2:00 pm to 4 pm. On March 15th, we will be celebrating Pi Day. For those of you who do not know what Pi is: it is the special number you get when you divide any circle's distance around by its distance across. The actual number is 3.14159265358... We will be serving pie and ice cream in the clubhouse to observe the day. There will be a raffle and a silent auction. Please be sure to party with us.

The membership drive has been very successful. The Association provides paper goods for the monthly birthday cake, 4th of July, holiday parties and other CCVRA sponsored events. We also supply the drinks and snacks for bingo and movie night. If you have not signed up, this is a good way to support the many activities we have.

As a reminder, since the clubhouse now has an alarm system, it is very important that you close any windows that you open during an event. If the windows stay open, the alarms will go on at 10 pm. The police might be called in to check on what is happening. You do not want to be responsible for this to occur. So, remember to check windows and doors are closed when you leave the facility.

History and Old Photos

Built in 1585 as a tollgate, The Spaniards Inn is one of London's most legendary historic pubs.

Famously tied to the highwayman Dick Turpin, the inn is noted for its role in the 1780 Gordon Riots, where the landlord famously saved Kenwood House by distracting a mob with free ale.

Interesting History

1949 — She Wore a Yellow Ribbon

A classic Western that brought together a legendary cast, She Wore a Yellow Ribbon is remembered as one of John Ford's greatest films and a high point of the cavalry Western genre.

John Wayne leads the film as Captain Nathan Brittles, a seasoned cavalry officer nearing retirement. Wayne's performance captures the quiet strength, honor, and emotional weight of a man who has devoted his life to duty.

Harry Carey Jr. plays a young officer under Brittles' command, representing the new generation of soldiers learning the true cost of loyalty and courage. His presence adds depth and sincerity to the story.

Ben Johnson, a real-life cowboy and stuntman turned actor, brings authenticity and rugged skill to the film. His performance feels effortless and natural, fitting perfectly into the world of the frontier.

George O'Brien appears as one of the experienced officers, adding classic Western gravitas and a sense of old-school frontier tradition.

John Agar plays one of the younger soldiers, delivering a solid performance that reflects the uncertainty and bravery of youth.

Together, this cast creates a powerful blend of experience, strength, and emotional truth — making She Wore a Yellow Ribbon a timeless Western that still resonates with audiences today.

Interesting History

On November 5, 1985, millions of Americans turned on their televisions and saw Lucille Ball in a way they had never seen before.

She was seventy-four years old. For decades, she had been the face of laughter. Red hair. Big expressions. Perfect timing. To most people, she would always be Lucy from I Love Lucy.

But that night, she was someone else.

CBS aired Stone Pillow, a made-for-television film that asked Ball to step far away from comedy and into something painful and quiet.

In the film, she played Florabelle, an elderly homeless woman living on the streets of New York City. Florabelle had no home, no safety, and no one looking out for her. The character was partly inspired by Ball's own grandmother, Flora Belle Hunt.

The story focused on older homeless women, a group rarely depicted on television in the 1980s. These were women who had slipped out of view. Women who the world did not often stop to see.

To play the role, Ball stripped away everything audiences expected. No red hair. No bright makeup. No glamorous clothes. She wore layered, worn clothing and let herself look tired and weathered.

Parts of the film were shot on the streets of New York City. Although the story took place in winter, filming happened in May. Ball wore heavy clothing in warm weather, adding to the strain on her body.

The role was physically demanding. During production, Ball became dehydrated and was hospitalized. Reports at the time noted how hard the work was, especially given her age and existing health problems. Still, she returned and finished the film.

When Stone Pillow aired, more than twenty million people watched.

The response was divided.

Some critics praised Ball for her courage. They admired her choice to take on a serious, uncomfortable role so late in her career. Others found the film too bleak. Some viewers said it was difficult to see a woman so closely tied to joy and laughter living in such harsh conditions on screen.

Ball understood that reaction.

In interviews after the broadcast, she said she knew the film would be hard to watch. It was not meant to entertain in the usual way. It was meant to make people notice. To think. To see elderly homeless women who were often ignored.

Stone Pillow became her final television movie.

Lucille Ball died on April 26, 1989, at the age of seventy seven, from a ruptured aortic aneurysm. Her career lasted more than sixty years. She was not only a legendary performer but also a producer and executive. She became the first woman to run a major television production studio.

Stone Pillow is not her most famous work. It is rarely mentioned alongside her comedies.

But it remains important.

It shows a woman at the end of a brilliant career choosing truth over comfort. Visibility over laughter. A story that asked audiences to look at something they might rather turn away from.

Lucille Ball made people laugh for a lifetime.

In Stone Pillow, she asked them to see.

At 74, Lucille Ball traded laughter for rags and heating grates. The role hospitalized her. Critics recoiled. She stayed—because someone had to.

The Recipe Box

Upside Down Orange Cake

Costco Connection - January 2026

Instructions

Slice oranges into 1/8- to 1/4-inch rounds. Preheat oven to 350 F. Add melted butter to a 9-inch cake pan and swirl to coat. Sprinkle 3-1/2Tbsp sugar evenly over the bottom, then place orange slices in a circular pattern covering the pan. Set aside.

Whisk the flour, baking powder and salt in a large bowl. In a medium bowl, mix the milk, oil, vanilla, remaining 1 cup sugar, vinegar and orange zest until well combined. Add wet ingredients to flour mixture and mix until combined. Spread batter evenly over oranges. Bake for 25 to 35 minutes, or until cake is set and golden.

Allow cake to cool in the pan for 5 to 10 minutes. Use a knife to loosen edges around cake if needed. Place a plate on top of the pan and carefully invert the cake onto the plate. Allow to cool before slicing and serving. Makes 10 to 12 servings.
