President's Message

Hi,

Fall is already upon us. We are approaching the holiday season. That also means it is time to think about being on the Cape Cod Village Residents Association Board. We are always looking for people with new ideas and thoughts. You do not need to be an officer as we have five at large members. If you are interested in participating, please contact me either by email (pawegner12@gmail.com) or by phone (650-303-4072).

The Jimmy Buffett Watch party was loads of fun. There was only one hiccup in that the weather did not cooperate in Wisconsin for the livestreaming. They had thunder and lightning (I am not sure Californians have seen that in awhile), so the show could not be live. We were able to watch a previous show from the same locale. The cheeseburgers and fries from Habit were wonderful. The winners of the best costumes were Nina Kramer, Alice and Paul Goodwin, and Valentina Stahl. Thank you to Tim Gladwin for organizing this.

The September activities for CCVRA include Bingo on September 8th, the Chinese Mid-Autumn Moon Festival on September 11th, and an International Potluck on September 24th. I hope to see many of you at the upcoming events.

As a reminder, the speed limit at Cape Cod Village is 15 miles per hour. There is a reason for this as we are a senior community. Many of us walk around the park on a daily basis. So please be careful when you are driving through the park and watch for the people walking.

Please continue putting out the plastic bottles and cans. The Treasure Seekers will be collecting on the first Sunday of the month (September 4th).

TREASURE SEEKERS REPORT

Treasure Seekers is going to permanently pickup donations once a month on the first Sunday of each month. For the month of July, Treasure Seekers collected $181.09. Our next collection day is August 7, 2022.

OLD BUSINESS

► BBQ

The new BBQ was used at the 4th of July and worked well. It is a good size.

NEW BUSINESS

► BBQ

The BBQ that was purchased by CCVRA in 2004 has died. The Association is looking to purchase a new BBQ as two are needed for outside events. Since the big BBQ is permanently attached to the concrete, it has been requested that we purchase a canopy to keep the Chef cool and out of the sun. We also need to get a mat to put in front of the BBQ to protect the concrete from grease splatters.

Cost: BBQ: $230.00

Canopy: 12 X 12: $140.00

Mat: $40.00

Total expense to the Association would be approximately: $450.00

It was moved by Kitty Etter and seconded by Diane Daley that the Association purchase a new BBQ, canopy and mat within the above budget. Motion carried.

► EVENTS

NEEDED - Event Chairpersons

As mentioned before, if we do not have a Chairperson for an event, the event will not happen. Alice and Paul Goodwin have been Chairs for at least 4 events. Sheila Wark and Peggy Wegner have been involved with at least 4 events.

4th of July

We had 80 residents and guests attend. Everyone seemed to enjoy themselves. We had a BBQ of burgers and hot dogs. The meal was rounded out with coleslaw, jello salads, baked beans and ice cream for dessert. For activities, there was a Cookie Walk, Pony races, Disc Golf and Bingo. We would like to thank everyone who helped out.

Jimmy Buffett Concert Watch Party - July 23, 2022

We had 25 people attend. Everyone had a good time. Unfortunately the weather did not cooperate so the live concert was cancelled. In it's place, we were able to show a 2019 concert from the same venue. We had wonderful burgers from the Habit Burger Grill, key lime pie and washed it down with a frozen concoction. Winners of the costume contest were: Nina Kramer, Paul and Alice Goodwin and Valentina Stahl.

President's Dinner - August 27, 2022

Alice Goodwin is the chairperson. Nina Kramer and Rainer Hoffmann are the Past-President honorees. The meal is being catered by Harry's Hofbrau. There will be a choice of turkey or roast beef, carrot salad, mashed potatoes and gravy and cake.

Chinese Moon Festival - September 11, 2022

Weizhi Sun and Pong Yeung to chair. More details to follow.

International Party - September 24, 2022

Barb Matson is the chairperson. This will be our first potluck since the beginning of COVID. Details to follow.

Halloween and Thanksgiving

Will need a chairperson in order to have them.

Thanksgiving

Alice Goodwin has been talking to Marie Callender's for a turkey dinner. The cost has gone up. If we were to have the dinner catered by them, it would be $25 for members and $27 for non-members. It was felt by the residents in attendance at the meeting that this would be too much money. Also, it was mentioned that the last meal we had from Marie Callender's was too salty and the vegetables had too much pepper, making them unappetizing to some people. We will look at other alternatives if we get a chairperson.

Holiday Party - December 10, 2022

The board will run it.

Comments, questions and additional items invited from the floor

We would like to thank Diane Daley for providing cookies for our meet and greet.

There being no further business, a motion to adjourn was made by Mary Knoppe and seconded by Elizabeth Morrison. Motion carried.

Meeting Adjourned at 7:30 pm. The next meeting is August 30, 2022 at 7:00 pm., with a Meet and Greet and coffee at 6:45.

Respectfully submitted,
Sheila Wark
Secretary

Historical Essay

Henry Cogswell and His Monuments

by Gloria Lenhart, originally published in The Semaphore #203, Summer 2013

Why is there a monument dedicated to temperance topped with Benjamin Franklin in the middle of Washington Square?

The Ben Franklin temperance monument didn't start out in Washington Square.

It was installed in 1879 at the corner of Columbus and Kearny, where the Zoetrope building now stands. It was moved to Washington Square in 1904. The city probably would have gotten rid of it altogether, except for the likeness of Ben standing on top. Instead, it was banished to an out-of-the-way park that the Chronicle at the time dismissed as "where mostly the children of San Francisco's Latin Quarter play."

Ben's monument was the first of eight granite-and-bronze drinking fountains that Henry David Cogswell — millionaire dentist, '49er and real-estate magnate — would donate to San Francisco in the 1880s. Only three of these fountains were installed and all but the one now in Washington Square were removed within a few years. Objections to the new fountains were raised because they were topped with a figure that looked a lot like Dr. Cogswell himself. The doctor insisted that his intention was only to portray an ideal man, and any resemblance was purely coincidental.

San Francisco wasn't the only city to accept Cogswell's generosity. Cogswell donated similar drinking fountains, also topped with his likeness, to Boston, Buffalo and Rochester, N.Y., and a dozen other eastern cities. Most are long gone, although Cogswell monuments still stand in New York City and Pawtucket, R.I. In Washington, D.C., the Cogswell monument near the National Archives inspired the formation of the Cogswell Society, which meets on the first Friday of every month. Its rallying cry is: "Temperance. I'll drink to that!"

The story of Cogswell's monuments began in 1873. That was the year that Columbus Avenue (then called Montgomery Avenue) was cut diagonally through the North Beach street grid to provide better access to the waterfront. Cogswell was an accomplished dentist who had invented a process for securing dentures and was a pioneer in the use of chloroform. But he had made his fortune through shrewd investments in real estate. He owned a large lot on Kearny Street which was cut in half when the new avenue was put in. The city paid the doctor for the land they used, but left Cogswell with a tiny triangle at the gore point of Columbus and Kearny. The lot was only 12 feet on its longest side, too small to build on, but Cogswell was determined to find some way to make money from it.

Cogswell soon had his answer. In 1875, actress Lotta Crabtree donated an ornate drinking fountain to the city, which was placed on a prominent corner downtown on Market Street, near the newly opened Palace Hotel. Lotta's fountain immediately became a popular gathering place, inspiring Cogswell to design a fountain of his own. He had it made in Connecticut where he was from and shipped out. City water is all that ever flowed through the taps marked Vichy and Cal. Seltzer. Still a large crowd cheered the fountain when it was unveiled in May 1879.

Cogswell Seamen's Memorial in Lincoln Park

Whether Cogswell dedicated his fountain to temperance out of commitment to the cause, or because it guaranteed a group of enthusiastic supporters for his fountain, is not known. The Chronicle called Cogswell's fountain "that grey granite tombstone." But Cogswell was making money from it. He installed small booths around his fountain that he rented to bootblacks and merchants. Then he put in benches and a podium, which he rented to politicians and preachers. The corner of Kearny and Columbus became known as Franklin Hall.

By then, Cogswell was approaching his 60th year and was worried about his legacy. Having no children to carry on the Cogswell name, he turned to philanthropy. He pledged to provide one fountain for every 100 saloons in San Francisco. He offered temperance fountains to any city or town that wanted them.

Brooklyn, N.Y., was the first city to remove Cogswell's fountain amid protests. San Francisco cancelled installation of any more fountains after newspapers called for the removal of the two on public land. On New Year's Day 1894, a group of young journalists lassoed the Cogswell statue at Market and Drumm streets and pulled it down. Later that year, the Cogswell fountain at Market, Battery and Bush streets was replaced by the Mechanics Monument, which is still there today.

The fountains were not Cogswell's only philanthropic misstep. His offer to fund a College of Dentistry at UC Berkeley was rebuffed when Dr. Cogswell insisted the school be built on an undesirable piece of property he owned in San Francisco. He later built the Cogswell Polytechnical College to provide a practical education for boy and girls, but then sued to reclaim it from its trustees. Dr. Cogswell died at age 80 in 1900. He lies in Mountain View Cemetery in Oakland under a 70-foot-tall monument that he designed and installed 10 years before his death. Four granite figures representing faith, hope, charity and temperance stand at its four corners. Two railroad cars were needed to ship it from Connecticut.

San Francisco has one other Cogswell monument. In 1884, Mrs. Rebecca Lambert, widow of a sea captain, asked Cogswell to provide a 15-foot-high iron monument to mark a 400-acre plot overlooking the Golden Gate as a burial ground for seaman. The monument stands today on the 15th green of the Lincoln Park Golf Course.

A big thank-you to all who travelled to Margaritaville with us at the Jimmy Buffett watch party on Saturday July 23!

25 people attended and watched. The Alpine Valley Concert was postponed due to extreme storms in Wisconsin, so what did Jimmy Buffett do? Margaritaville TV ran a 2019 concert from the same venue. We enjoyed cheeseburgers in paradise and key lime pie, washed down with a frozen concoction.

Congratulations to the winners with the best costumes: Nina Kramer, Alice and Paul Goodwin and Valentina Stahl.

Special thanks to all those who helped out: Sheila Wark, Peggy Wegner, Valentina Stahl, Derek Shaw, Alice Goodwin!

Historical Essay

Lotta's Fountain

San Francisco's oldest surviving monument and meeting place for 1906 survivors.

Standing at the corner of Market, Geary and Kearny streets in San Francisco, Lotta's Fountain is a twenty-four-foot cast iron sculpture, painted bronze and adorned with lion's heads, griffins, and other ornaments.

The fountain has survived earthquakes, fires and attempts to move it to Golden Gate Park, and in the process has become San Francisco's oldest surviving monument.

In many ways, the fountain, which has played a central role in many of the city's greatest events, tells the story of San Francisco itself.

It should tell one something about San Francisco in the 1870s that the monument was given to the city not by a politician or captain of industry, but by a famous Vaudeville performer, Lotta Crabtree. Lotta loved the city and had gotten her start there during the Gold Rush days, when she would dance on barrels in saloons for miners who would throw gold nuggets at her feet. Using some of the gold coin, gold nuggets and gold watches that gentlemen bestowed upon her, Lotta bought the city a fountain in 1875.

After the 1906 earthquake, dazed survivors looked for anything left standing to congregate around. Lotta's Fountain served as a meeting place for people to be reunited with their loved ones. Every year at 5:12 a.m. on April 18th a couple of hundred people, including the remaining survivors of the earthquake (as of 2010 there was one remaining 104-year-old survivor, Bill Del Monte, who was 3 months old at the time of the quake), meet in a ceremony of remembrance. In 1910, famed opera singer Madame Luisa Tetrazzini faced legal struggles that prevented her from singing in New York City and said she had already been booked in San Francisco. As a result, she held a press conference where she declared, "I will sing in San Francisco if I have to sing there in the streets, for I know the streets of San Francisco are free." On Christmas Eve in 1910 Lotta's Fountain was nearly engulfed by a crowd, estimated at 250,000 people, who had gathered to hear the performance. "Although Madame Tetrazzini sang without the aid of a loudspeaker system, her voice was carried 500 miles to Los Angeles over a telephone to members of the Bohemian Club."

Deodato Stiavetti, an immigrant from near Lucca, Italy, sold newspapers at the fountain for years. First for the Call, then the Call-Bulletin. Ultimately, he became a circulation manager for the News-Call Bulletin. Called "Dato," he was more familiarly known as "Joe the Fountain."

Since then Lotta's Fountain has served host to several historic events in San Francisco including performances by Jan Kubelik, the world's foremost violinist of his time, as well as Misha Elman, and a recreation of Madame Tetrazzini's performance in 1960. The fountain was completely dismantled in 1998 (the workers found that the metal rings holding it together had become paper-thin and that the fountain was held together by "its own weight") cleaned, refurbished and reassembled.

Today thousands of daily commuters pass it on their way to work, little aware of the role it has played in their city's history.
